Structured Feedback Benefits

instructional and correcting
Structured Feedback Benefits

- Feedback equally satisfactory to students
- Results comparable between students
- Reliability and consistency
- Reduced effort, efficient, faster
- Improved academic performance (sometimes)
- Objective, obvious, fair → reduced anxiety
Structured Feedback Potential

Can be...

- measured for validity
- used to focus and improve courses
- used to facilitate discussion
- co-created with students
- used in peer and self assessment
- used in conjunction with unstructured feedback
Structured Feedback Practice

- Set expectations
- Instruct students on use
- Train markers
- Consider each criterion independently
- Refine over time

Avoid
- subjectivity
- idiosyncrasies
- Inequity
- same number of levels across criteria
